

Planning for Indirect Expenses

---

What are indirect expenses?

Indirect expenses are costs you'll have as a college student that are not covered on your bill. For example, you'll need to pay for things like books, school supplies, transportation, personal supplies and more.

How do I estimate indirect expenses?

Indirect expenses will vary widely because of things like your living situation, your personal preferences and needs, and even your major or program. Use the estimates on this resource as a starting point. The additional information provided can help you figure out if you might end up paying less or more than those estimates based on your unique situation.

Where did you get your estimates?

The estimates in this guide are based on recent national data and surveys of what students report spending. Housing and food reflects data from colleges in California, Massachusetts, and New York, where many of the students we serve live.

Other costs are informed by national college budget data and student expense research. These amounts represent a moderate 9-month academic year to help you plan - you may spend more or less depending on your circumstances.

Data Sources

- Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS), 2024-2025 academic year
- College Board, Trends in College Pricing and Student Aid 2025
- California Student Aid Commission, Student Expenses and Resources Survey (SEARS), 2024-2025
- National Association of College Stores, Student Watch: Attitudes and Behaviors toward Course Materials: 2025

Housing & Food

$17,600

You might pay less than this if...

- You live at home with family and pay reduced or no rent
- The cost of living in your region is lower on average
- You have more housemates or roommates
- The grocery store where you shop has affordable prices/deals

You might pay more than this if...

- You live in a region with a high cost of living
- You live alone or have fewer housemates or roommates
- You tend to use a delivery service for groceries
- You frequently eat at restaurants and/or buy takeout

uAspire Tips

- If you'll be living at home, ask your family whether you are expected to contribute to rent and food before you start school, so you can include those expenses in your planning.
- Create a grocery list and stick to a budget when food shopping.

Transportation

$1,350

You might pay less than this if...

- You live on or near campus and can walk to class
- Your college offers a discounted public transportation pass for local travel
- You do not need to purchase airfare in order to travel home for breaks

You might pay more than this if...

- You commute to class/work by car and pay for gas
- You need to take a plane or train to travel home for breaks

Books & Educational Supplies

$1,100

You might pay less than this if...

- You can take advantage of cost-saving techniques like renting or borrowing textbooks instead of buying, or buying used.

See our resource, Textbook Tips, for ideas!

You might pay more than this if...

- You have a large one-time purchase like a new laptop or tablet
- Your classes or program tends to require many textbooks, access codes, software subscriptions, and/or physical supplies.

uAspire Tip

- If you are purchasing a computer, your college may be able to increase your financial aid to help cover the cost.

Personal Expenses & Miscellaneous

Personal expenses range from toiletries and clothing to your cell phone bill and medical prescriptions. Miscellaneous includes anything not already mentioned, including things you do for fun and entertainment.

$2,200

You might pay less than this if...

- You buy your toiletries/personal items in bulk or on sale
- You don't have many recurring costs to pay for (like a cell phone bill or prescriptions)
- You choose lower-cost "fun" activities

You might pay more than this if...

- There are many toiletries/personal items you tend to buy on a regular basis
- You cover your own cell phone bill
- You regularly spend money going out with friends